Reconfigured

Story & photos by Amber Storey-Knight

The Dickson Gallery of Fine Art recently had an opening reception for Jacque Hillman. Jacque called her showing "Reconfigured" for good reason, and presented some of the most unique pieces of jewelry ever seen in Jackson.

Incorporating selected parts from obsolete computers, the healing properties of copper, and various precious stones, Jacque Hillman creates one-of-a-kind art jewelry. "I saw what was inside computers and thought it was beautiful. I also thought about all that copper being dumped into landfills, and wanted to do my part in saving the environment," Jacque said. Some of the precious stones have healing properties, some attract positive energy and some repel negative energy.

Her work is so incredibly unique and has such broad appeal, many of the displayed pieces at the reception sold quickly, with orders for more being taken. Jacque was thrilled with the response and commented she would be busy for quite a while fulfilling the orders.

Rachel Dickson provided refreshments, wine, and live music by Tom Price.
